Chapter 16: Building a Thriving Bioresonance Practice

The Business of Healing: Ethical Considerations

Principle #1: First, Do No Harm

While bioresonance is non-invasive, improper use can still cause harm through:

Overwhelming detoxification reactions

Creating dependency on the practitioner

Delaying necessary medical care

Making false promises about "cures"

The Ethical Practitioner's Pledge:

I will never claim to diagnose, treat, or cure disease

I will always recommend clients maintain relationships with their medical doctors

I will refer out when a condition is beyond my scope

I will continue my education and stay current with best practices

I will honor the client's autonomy and informed consent
